Lasting Relationships

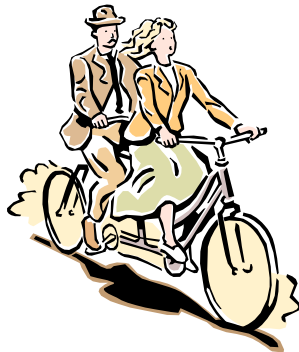

Re-Gen Ministries Inc.

If we aspire to influence others, we must become the cultivators of lasting relationships

Cultivating Lasting Relationships

In a recent survey, CEOs around the world have been asked to name the characteristic they want to see most in potential employees. Almost without exception, they nominated the “ability to work with other people”. They want people who work well with others. They want relationship people.

Building lasting relationship takes a lot of hard work

Relationship is influence. It is a relationship of influence in which one person seeks to influence the behavior, attitudes, visions, values and beliefs of another.

If we do not get our relationships right, we risk being unhappy, unfulfilled and ineffective in life. Or as author John Maxwell says, “When you understand that being connected to others is one of life’s greatest joys, you realize that life’s best comes when you initiate and invest in solid relationships.”

Underlying Values to forming Lasting Relationships

Each of us brings a set of personal values to our role at home, in the organization and in church with each action, decision or policy. Everything we do reinforces our culture and the way we interact with each other.

What are some of the values that you think you bring to your community? What is important to you? To what extent are you prepared to be held accountable in your relationships? How do those values shape the way you want to live out your life?

For Whom

This workshop will serve as an inspiration and practical guide for leaders and members to discover secrets to lasting relationships. Discover that God’s very nature is relational.

Our relationships with people will determine our success in life
